LEAD FACILITATOR

Chris Singh

Chris Singh has been working with adult learners for 17 years primarily at the CUNY LaGuardia Community College campus, located in the Long Island City section of Queens, NY.

As a Leadership Specialist, he works both in-and-out of the classroom presenting on various leadership topics to the college community. This includes students, faculty, and staff. In addition to presenting and facilitating, Chris mentors the Student Government Association and, is one of the advisors for Alpha Theta Phi chapter of Phi Theta Kappa (PTK) the two-year honor society for community colleges, and other student groups and programs. Although his work focuses on adult learners, he works closely with local high schools on LaGuardia's campus.

Chris has lived in the Bronx for all his life except for 2 years while completing his undergraduate studies at SUNY Binghamton. His mother is from the Dominican Republic and his father is from Trinidad and Tobago. Growing up in a diverse family and urban neighborhood has given Chris a unique view on race, identity, culture, and diversity. His life experiences and background have allowed him to bridge and cross boundaries making him an effect presenter and facilitator. He is the father of two wonderful boys, Asher and Issac "Amigo." Chris has twice been confused with Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson and Vin Diesel but stated "I don't know why... I don't have the muscles or the money. I only have a shaved head. But to a child I guess that's enough."

He believes that leadership is truly "everyone business" and seeks to motivate and inspire individuals, teams, and organizations to achieve their goals.
